He (desperately)-I know it is, Nedlie, but I can't propose to-night-I forgot the ring-You will forgive me, won't you? Cumso-Here's something very sweet in the ewspaper.

ong is, pa; Father—"onsidering the number of funerals auxed by overhead wires, it ought to belong o the "bury" family. Mrs. Cumso-Is it a poem? Oh, rend it to me, please, dear)
Cumso (reading)—Twenty pounds of granu-lated sugar for $1. [From the Pittsburg Bulletin.] Chawles—What have you done with that dweadful palah of new twousahs, my boy? Bolphins—Sold to a life-saving station on the fersey coast. They can be heard fosh miles from shosh and they cost them less than a few horn. No Man.

[The Rider and Driver.]

A.—Jones seems to be riding his horse to death. I woulder whether hell notice that sign, "Refreshment for Man and Besist," and go in? go in?

B—He may; but in his case it will be refreshment for two beasts.

"I tell you. Bill." said Smoky Mike, the burglar, "we hard-workin' thieves don't make half as much money out o' the business at them dude bank presidents and Pennsylvania officials." "That's so, Smoke," returned Bill. "An that just shows the value of eddication, which I has frequently remarked."

Poor Old Chicago. (From the Biston Courler,]

Ethel—Now, don't tell me, Bob, that you really care anything for that Miss Cornbeel tron Chicago.

Bob—Sister Ethel, if the whole great world were mine, I'd giadly lay it at her feet.

Ethel—Well, they'd need it.
